FINAL PROPOSAL
Philip Lee

- For my final, I plan on making a portfolio for the work that I've made so far as a Junior in IDM.
- I plan on using the bootstrap template to create this website.
- In order to show off my work I plan on creating a sleek, monochrome design that will not distract the viewers from my work.
- If possible, I would like to create animations that fly into the screen as seen in the inspiration below
    - Inspiration: https://env.studio/about
        - This inspiration is also the vibe and color that I want to create and use for my website
- There will be a tabs on the top right corner to view different pages
    - About me
        - Essentially just a page that will explain who I am, what I studying, and where I'm from
    - My work
        - The main page of the website where I showcase my work

        - I won't be displaying cats, but this in-class exercise is the general direction and look I would be going for to show my work, where the viewers would be able to scroll through the work and have the pieces take up the whole screen
    - Inspirations
        - Creators and other types of people that have inspired me and my work

- For the color palette of the page, I would like to keep it just black, gray, and white.
- In conclusion, I think the biggest challenge will be creating the animations of the words (which I plan on using all the pages) but is what I think will make this website portfolio stand out to the viewers.
    - And if possible, transitioning smoothly from one page to the next (have previous page content swing out then the new page content swing in?)
